INTRODUCTION

AfriForum's municipal audit is a product of the Centre for Local Government and aims to measure the quality of life and service delivery in the country's respective municipal areas. Municipalities are the level of government that is closest to people and provide many of the important services that people are dependent on to survive and thrive, for example roads, and water and electricity provision. This level of government is to a large extent in a dilapidated or dilapidating state, however, and this affects millions of people in the country.

Another aim of the audit is to provide an overall picture of municipalities, thereby continuously focusing the attention on the fate of these municipalities and their residents. It is also an informative tool for the public, the media, opinion formers, decision makers and administrators to understand their municipalities and apply pressure to bring about change where necessary.

The municipal audit examines the demographics, socio-economic conditions, service delivery issues and the management of municipalities. Each report analyses the municipalities of a specific province, and each municipality is awarded an impression score out of 10. Follow-up reports on specific provinces also indicate which municipalities have improved and which municipalities have deteriorated. The first edition dealt with South Africa's most densely populated province and economic hub, Gauteng, while the second focused on the North West province. This report deals with Mpumalanga.

CONCLUSION

For the most part, service delivery and management controls in Mpumalanga's municipalities are incredibly weak. Rampant unemployment, poor refuse removal and the paucity of piped water are some of the main troubles that afflict the municipalities in the province. Poor audit outcomes and high irregular spending are at the order of the day and undermine service delivery. The availability and use of electricity, as well as rising schooling levels, are indeed exceptions to the dreary picture that obtains in most municipalities. However, these are to a large degree reliant on decisions taken on and capacity provided by other spheres of government – and not by the municipalities. Also, rising school levels are undone by the high unemployment rate and the seeming non-availability of work within various municipal areas.

Steve Tshwete Local Municipality is, and has been, a lone but relative bright spot in a province where municipal challenges abound and do not seem to improve. Its low unemployment and other positive service delivery data signify a municipality that is reasonably well-managed. Nevertheless, there is vast room for improvement and the management of Steve Tshwete should not be lulled into a sense of complacency.

Lastly, the non-availability of official data is cause for concern. If not for AfriForum's own efforts in measuring the quality of water, effluent and landfill sites, these metrics cannot be measured with any degree of certitude. A lack of accurate information translates to deficient decision-making on the part of municipal management teams, as well as the public. It is recommended that municipalities strengthen their capacity to measure the effectiveness of their own service delivery.
